1,242 Boys and Girls Start Vacations This Week;
370 Go To-day

This week 1,242 boys and girls begin vacations. To-day 370 go out. To-morrow 531 follow. Thursday 260 take train. Friday 81 compose the week's rear guard.

They all go out from hot tenement streets to the cool woods, from congested tenement houses to airy country homes, from traffic jammed, dangerous playgrounds to the wide open play spaces of the countryside.

Where shall the children of New York play? A good many good folk are discussing the problem and trying to solve it. As a result we have playgrounds and play streets and an ingenious proposal for backyard playgrounds. Some day the problem will be solved, but to-day at least nine-tenths of the city's children must play the games that exercise their growing bodies, at the risk of their lives, in and out amid the constantly increasing traffic of the streets.

Not long ago one of the staff of The Tribune Fund counted the youngsters at play on a single block of Mulberry Street. Then he computed the average of the block from cross street to cross street and from house front to house front. He estimated the per capita allowance of play space for each child was three feet by eight—a space the size of a grave.

Conditions on this block were, of course, worse than the average, but there are many other blocks in the city where conditions are no better. In many places they are only a little better. The number of children maimed and killed by traffic in these streets is appalling—if one stops to consider the statistics.

There is no better way for the present to relieve this situation than to help The Tribune Fund get thousands of the city's children out of the streets and into the country for a fortnight of play free from the dangers of the streets.

A contribution of $7 to the fund will provide this boon for one girl or one boy. The fund can give 10,000 children vacations this summer if every one interested in child welfare will help.

Two hundred and fifty of to-day's "Fresh Airs" go to the Shepherd Knapp Farm at Litchfield, Conn. All of these are boys from five to twelve years of age. Another hundred go to Eunice Home, Chapel Hill, N. J. These are girls of from twelve to sixteen years. The remaining twenty children go to private homes in Putnam, Conn. Half of this number are boys and girls going back to renew friendships with hosts who entertained them last year.

Yesterday's contributions added $1,355.25 to the total for the season. Add your bit to-day. It will do more now than later.

Anderson Asks Catholics' Stand On Wadsworth

Anti-Saloon Leaguer Anxious to Know Whether the Church Will Back 'Open Allies of Tammany'

William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, who had a heated controversy with noted Catholic prelates last winter, wrote an open letter yesterday to Archbishop Hayes inquiring whether the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church "in this vicinity" was expressed in "The Tablet," which declared it would oppose any candidate for public office "who is indorsed by the Anti-Saloon League or who indorses the league."

The Archbishop is at a religious retreat and will not be back at his labors until Saturday. It was the belief of a member of the Archbishop's household that on his return to town he would reply to Mr. Anderson.

Mr. Anderson's letter in part follows: "Most Reverend and Dear Sir: "Last winter 'The Tablet,' a Catholic paper published in Brooklyn, which I understand claims to be official and is within your jurisdiction, said editorially: "We hereby serve notice on Republican and Democratic parties of this state in general, and all politicians in particular, that we will strongly oppose any candidate for public office who is indorsed by the Anti-Saloon League or who indorses the league." "I respectfully inquire whether this quoted 'The Tablet' is the official Catholic Church, does in fact represent the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church in this vicinity, as interpreted by you, its responsible head in this archdiocese?" "If so, does this include support of the United States Senator, Wadsworth, who was Republican machine backer, once ally of Tammany on the liquor question, act as though they had full assurance of support to offset the loss of dry Republicans?"

Mayor's Bus Plan Raises Question of 'Who'll Get Plum?'

Politicians Are Speculating Over Scheme for Private Lines; Old Corporations Active; Hearing July 21

Mayor Hylan's proposal for the operation of bus lines by a private corporation, under proper regulation by the city, has caused considerable speculation in political circles as to what person or persons will be the recipient of so choice a plum. If the project is approved by the Board of Estimate, and it is likely that it will be, the Mayor and his associates will be in a position to play favorites in an enterprise of unusual profit to some.

Several old corporations which got franchises from the city to operate bus lines in years past are understood to be making attempts to ascertain whether the old franchises have lapsed because of years of inactivity on the part of their holders. Inquiries in this regard have been made of the Public Service Commission. One or two companies are said to have obtained perpetual franchises years ago, although they were never particularly active afterward in operating busses.

Mrs. Julia Cruger Once Famous As Author, Dies Here

Grand Niece of Washington Irving Was Known as Mrs. Wharton of Her Time; Was Prominent in New York Society

Mrs. Julia Grinnell Cruger, widow of Col. S. Van Rensselaer Cruger, died yesterday at her home in this city. The funeral, which will be private, will be held to-morrow. Interment will take place in the Washington Irving plot in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, at Irvington, N. Y.

Mrs. Cruger, who was a grand-niece of Washington Irving, was one of a few society women of New York who gained a conspicuous and important place in the world of literature. Thirty years ago her name was as familiar to everyone interested in literary matters. She is referred to by those of the present day who remember her writings as the Edith Wharton of her time.

Mrs. Cruger was Miss Julia Grinnell Storror, daughter of Thomas Wentworth Storror, of Boston. Her marriage to Colonel Cruger, a veteran of the Civil War, was a prominent place in New York society. Her husband was a director in numerous life insurance and railroad companies, and was controller of the vast real estate interests of Trinity Parish.

Mrs. Cruger's first attempt at writing was "A Diplomat's Diary," written under the name of her husband. The attention attracted by this book was much increased when it was learned that Mrs. Cruger was the author. Following this book, which appeared in the early 1890's, a number of other novels and essays were published. While much of that work was supposed to be purely the product of the writer's imagination, it was generally supposed that there were other parts founded upon her husband's political and business life.

"A Puritan Pagan" was published in 1890 and was followed by other novels and essays, several of which ran in serial form in the magazines. Some of these are "Healthy Heroines," "Slovenly Americans" and "The Modern Extinction of Genius," all of which were widely read.

After the death of her husband Mrs. Cruger abandoned, to a great degree, her literary activities and spent much of her time abroad. Ten years after his death she was married to a Frenchman in Washington, to Wade Chandler, of Canton, Ohio. She and her husband established a home at 9 Queen Street, London, England, where they lived for several years. They were divorced in 1916. Mrs. Cruger then took up her home in Paris, where she remained until a year ago, when she returned to this city.

Mrs. Cruger was a sister of the late Mrs. Francis McN. Bacon. Her nearest relative in this city is her nephew, Wentworth Cruger Bacon.

Former Empress Eugenie To Be Buried in England

Her Death in Madrid Sunday Was Preceded by Illness of Only Few Hours

MADRID, July 12.—Former Empress Eugénie of France, who died here yesterday morning, was ill only a few hours. She was exceptionally well on Saturday morning. At midday she lunched heartily, eating chicken and some ham. A short time later she became ill, exclaiming, "I feel very bad," and then she died. Her death was preceded by a severe attack of indigestion. Dr. Greda, physician to King Alfonso, was called, and finding her condition serious, summoned Dr. Moreno Zancudo, a specialist, and also two other physicians. They were, however, unable to relieve the patient.

Empress Eugénie seemed conscious that death was approaching, and those who stood by the bedside say she appeared glad to die in Spain, her native country.

Saturday afternoon, when the condition of Eugénie became worse, all her relatives, including King Alfonso, the Duchess of Alba, and the Duke of Parma, Dowager Duchess of Tarragona and the Countess of Mora.

During the night the Empress lost consciousness. But before doing so received the last sacraments of the Church from a clergyman. Eugénie died shortly before 8 o'clock on Sunday morning, never having regained consciousness.

The body was to be embalmed to-day in preparation for its transportation to England, where Eugénie will be buried at Farnborough. The funeral party probably will depart from Spain on Wednesday.

King Alfonso, who is in London, has sent a dispatch to the Prime Minister ordering a period of court mourning for the late Empress. The funeral party, and also to pay the customary royal honors to the dead.

Most of the members of the aristocracy and of the diplomatic corps filed past the body, which is lying in state in the Palacio de Lira, the home of the Duke of Alba.
